Judge:

I attended an election night party where your name was mentioned and thought you should know what complimentary things were said about you.

Peter Kilborn, a writer for the New York Times said he had met you while you were still at the FBI and had been impressed by how approachable you were - "not surrounded by sycophants like much of official Washington."

He added that others shared his view and that you were highly regarded.

It is not especially easy to draw praise from a writer from the New York Times, even in conversation. This was something I thought you should hear about.
